

Raising the Bar in D.C.: A Funding Campaign for Legal Services

Frequently Asked Questions

What is the Raising the Bar in D.C. Campaign?

The Campaign is an initiative launched by the D.C. Access to Justice Commission that provides special recognition to law firms that support local legal services providers. The Campaign establishes revenue-based benchmarks for law firm donations to legal services providers with the goal of substantially increasing financial support for organizations serving indigent residents. Because the benchmarks are based on revenue, the recognition levels are accessible to firms of all sizes and a wide range of firms, from large, multinational firms to solo practitioners, are honored each year.

What are the benchmark levels?

The levels are 0.110% of D.C. office revenue for platinum recognition, 0.090 % for gold and 0.075% for silver. The following chart can give you a rough estimate of the giving level required at different revenue levels:

Benchmark Levels		D.C. Office Revenue
		$100,000	$1,000,000	$10,000,000	$100,000,000
Platinum	0.110%	$110	$1,100	$11,000	$110,000
Gold	0.090%	$90	$900	$9,000	$90,000
Silver	0.075%	$75	$750	$7,500	$75,000

How do I determine if my firm is eligible for recognition?

First, calculate the donations made by your firm to the eligible organizations on the attached list during the campaign year. Only donations to these organizations – each of which has as a core mission the provision of direct legal services to low- or moderate-income District residents – count toward meeting the benchmark level. Cash donations, donation of attorneys’ fees, and sponsorship of fellowships at the organizations on the attached list all count. The value of pro bono work, the value of loaned associates, in-kind donations made by the firm, and donations made by individual attorneys do not count.

The list of eligible recipient organizations is updated periodically, and firms may reach out if they believe an organization meeting the eligibility criteria should be added to the list. For the 2024 Campaign moving forward, the restriction on counting contributions to the D.C. Access to Justice Commission has been removed – firms may include this full amount, if applicable, in their calculations.

Second, calculate your firm's D.C. office revenue. Revenue is calculated as an average of the preceding three years (e.g., for donations made in 2024, firms would look at the average of D.C. office revenue in 2023, 2022, 2021). The firm is not required to release to the Commission its revenue calculations or its method of calculating what revenue is attributed to the D.C. office. Firms take different approaches to this calculation.

Third, you will calculate your firm's recognition level. If your firm's giving represents 0.075% of its D.C. office revenue or higher, it is eligible for recognition at the silver level; 0.090% or higher at the gold level; and 0.110% or higher at the platinum level. The Commission's Executive Director, Nancy Drane (contact information below) is available to answer questions and assist in the calculations.

What happens if the firm qualifies?

Qualifying firms should fill out a reporting form for the previous calendar year's giving. Firms may use the past year's reporting form to assist in calculating the required giving levels. Historically, the Commission has also honored all participating firms through social media and, sometimes, at an event in the Spring following the campaign year. The receptions have featured a prominent speaker and receive press coverage. Previous events have included remarks by U.S. Attorney General Eric Holder, the Honorable David Tatel, U.S. Secretary of Labor Thomas E. Perez, U.S. Solicitor General Donald B. Verrilli, Jr., Principal Deputy Assistant U.S. Attorney General Vanita Gupta, U.S. Commission on Civil Rights Chair Catherine E. Lhamon, D.C. Attorney General Karl Racine, Chief Judge Anna Blackburne-Rigsby, Chief Judge Robert Morin, D.C. Mayor Vincent Gray, and the Honorable Eleanor Holmes Norton, who've each congratulated the firms for their leadership and support of local legal services providers. In 2018, D.C. Mayor Muriel Bowser issued a proclamation celebrating the success of the Campaign. Due to the pandemic, the Commission has highlighted firms through social media and a media campaign since the 2019 Leadership Circle.

Does the firm need to submit any documentation?

The Campaign is run on an honor system and firms are not required to provide their revenue or donation amounts to the Commission. However, the Commission does require firms to provide confidential information about its giving levels to Ernst & Young so that Ernst & Young can, in turn, provide aggregate data to the Commission. Specifically, firms are asked to provide Ernst & Young with their total amount of giving and what level of recognition this represents for the firm. Ernst & Young releases to the Commission only the total amount of giving by all participating firms. This allows the Commission to quantify the aggregate amount of money donated under the Campaign. The firm is not required at any time to provide information about its revenue or the amounts donated to individual providers. A reporting form is provided to participating firms in the early part of the year following the campaign year (i.e., firms will receive the 2024 reporting form in early 2025).

Which other firms are participating?

Thirty-nine firms participated in 2023. A historical listing of participating firms is attached.

Whom can I contact with questions?

Contact the Commission's Executive Director, Nancy Drane, nancy.drane@dcaccesstojustice.org, or 202-736-8334.
